

An opening paragraph of its own, written to run to two lines and no further, so that what follows starts part-way through the page.

Paragraph number 1 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 2 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 3 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 4 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 5 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 6 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 7 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 8 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 9 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 10 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 11 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 12 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 13 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 14 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 15 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 16 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 17 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 18 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 19 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 20 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 21 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 22 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 23 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 24 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 25 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.

Paragraph number 26 of twenty-six, written at some length so that it runs to a third line on a page of this width rather than stopping short on the second one, which is what makes a break fall inside it.