

Hyphenated.

Hyphenation is the business of breaking a word between two lines when the remainder would otherwise be unreasonably conspicuous, and typographers have argued about it interminably. Consider representative examples: communication, extraordinary, misunderstanding, particularly, responsibility, understanding, international, development, organisation.

Suppressed.

Hyphenation is the business of breaking a word between two lines when the remainder would otherwise be unreasonably conspicuous, and typographers have argued about it interminably. Consider representative examples: communication, extraordinary, misunderstanding, particularly, responsibility, understanding, international, development, organisation.

Justified.

Hyphenation is the business of breaking a word between two lines when the remainder would otherwise be unreasonably conspicuous, and typographers have argued about it interminably. Consider representative examples: communication, extraordinary, misunderstanding, particularly, responsibility, understanding, international, development, organisation.

Capitals.

COMMUNICATION EXTRAORDINARY
MISUNDERSTANDING PARTICULAR-LY RESPONSIBILITY UNDERSTAND-
ING INTERNATIONAL DEVELOPMENT
ORGANISATION CONSIDERATION.

